What Fools We Mortals Be

All the world loves a lover. The world can stand a good deal even from a mushy, sentimental chap like Romeo—if he loves only for love's sake alone. But when an affair of the heart resolves itself into an amour, in comparison with which an episode from an Elenor Glynn novel becomes a mere school-girl infatuation, and, moreover, is contaminated by the meanest and most mercenary designs, then it is time to draw the line.

The recent Gould-de Sagan marriage is a stench in the nostrils of every decent, self-respecting man. The Gould woman wanted the title, while the scion of decayed aristocracy had his eyes on the purse strings.

De Sagan's frantic pursuit of the object of his adoration to America was at the same time a ludicrous and a disgusting feature of the love affair. The threadbare nobleman was afraid to let the meal ticket get out of sight.

He is now "the happiest man in the world." Why shouldn't he be? He can now pay his club dues and his debts of honor. He can lay his hands on money when he wants to spend an evening at the roulette table. He can move out of his low-grade apartments and can pay his landlady what he owes her. He can bully his American wife and laugh in his sleeve over Boni's discomfort.

As for Princess Anna, she never knows when she has had enough. One would suppose that an experience such as she went through with her former husband would have cured her of the title habit. We felt sorry for her then. We are disgusted with her now.

Could We But See You

FACE TO FACE

Could we but talk with you, and tell you of the success of thousands of young men and women whom we have educated for a business career, we know that you would be convinced that by taking a thorough business and shorthand training, such as is offered at Bliss College, we could place you in line for rapid financial advancement and success. The Bliss School has enabled hundreds of young men and women to increase their earning capacity from 50% to 100% more by taking a thorough training along business lines.

We would like to tell you of hundreds of such young men as William Dobbins, who in five years has risen from a country schoolteacher to private secretary to John Jacob Astor, one of the greatest financiers of the present time; of Jesse Smith, once a clerk in a little store in a mining town, now Assistant Secretary of the Columbus Board of Trade; of McConnell Jacques, who left the farm at fifteen years of age—at nineteen, drawing a salary of over $1,500.00 a year; of six girls who graduated in a class within the last year, whose monthly salaries run as follows: $40.00, $45.00, $50.00, $55.00, $60.00, $65.00. Other girls who have been out for a longer period of time are making over $100.00 per month.

We urge you to visit us. If you cannot do so write for our booklet, entitled "The Seal of Fortune." It will give you an idea of the wonderful advantages afforded by a thorough business education at Bliss College, and you will learn of opportunities of which you have never dreamed.

It is a well-known fact that Bliss College surpasses all other schools of business in point of training, equipment, and success in placing students in positions. Ask us how we can help you to pay expenses while in school.

Logan Girl Takes an Overdose.

[Columbus Dispatch.]

Dr. Stanley Constable, wife of Lee Constable, is believed to have attempted suicide by taking carbolic acid, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shoemaker, 59 East Goodale street, where she boards with her husband, and Saturday night it was stated that her chances to live are very slight. At the house it was stated that she might have made a mistake in taking her medicine, as she did once before about three weeks ago when an overdose of laudanum put her to sleep for many hours.

No one saw her take the stuff. The first to discover her and to summon assistance were Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker. Dr. Constable was cold when she was found and breathing in agony. A four-ounce bottle of carbolic acid was found under the bed. At least it was labeled carbolic acid, although the contents are believed to have contained a mixture of some other drug, according to physicians who were summoned. Drs. Reibel and Peasley were called first.

Later Dr. W. D. Mansfield, father of the unfortunate woman, arrived and took charge of the case. The aged, white-haired father trembled as he worked with her and his face was drawn in agony.

Dr. Constable has not been well of late and it was stated at the Shoemaker residence that she had been acting strangely and complaining of pains in her head and back. She had been in the habit of taking morphine in her pain.

She is believed to have taken the dose of deadly poison at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A young woman residing in the neighborhood, who had come across the street to speak to her, said that her face, as she stood in the window, was as white as chalk and that she was gritting her teeth. The young woman was frightened and went away.

She was found about 6:30 o'clock by Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker. Dr. Mansfield, her father, was in Logan, and it was useless to hunt for him. However, he came into Columbus, as usual when he went to London, on the train arriving at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Constable is a graduate of the Ohio Medical college and has been a practicing physician. Her husband was formerly a salesman.

LATER.

Two bottles of medicine of the same color and a mistake whereby a diluted solution of carbolic acid was taken instead of the other, are said to have started the rumor that Mrs. Stanley Constable, a woman physician, had attempted suicide Saturday night because her husband was out of work. Dr. W. D. Mansfield of 93 Lincoln street, the father of Mrs. Constable said last night that the affair had been much exaggerated by gossiping neighbors, and that there was absolutely no basis for the suicide theory.

He said he arrived from Logan on the evening train to find his daughter in a critical condition because of taking the wrong medicine. Doctors worked over her and she was finally brought back to life. He said she was much prostrated, but was able to sit up yesterday in an arm chair. Dr. Mansfield considers her out of danger.—State Journal.

The Republican Platform.

The platform adopted at Chicago will not please thousands upon thousands of men who are Republicans in their politics. It will not please those who are in favor of standing "pat," nor will it please those who are in favor of revision. It was not made to stand on the whole platform may practically be summed up in a very few words—a declaration of alleged principles for which the bosses of the Republican party have no possible use. We cannot, therefore, in these latter days at least, judge of a party by its convention platform. We must judge of a party by what it has done in the past and by the personal character and tendencies of its candidates, certainly not by its platform.—Sandsky Register (Rep.)

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR
stops the cough and heals the lungs

Vorys Loses Out.

[Nelsonville Register.]

Frank H. Hitchcock has been selected by Hon. William H. Taft as chairman of the republican national executive committee. Mr. Taft's choice from the start for that responsible position was none other than Mr. Hitchcock, despite the fact that Hon. A. I. Vorys was led to believe that he had a show for the honor. In fact, Mr. Vorys was actually promised the national chairmanship when he was induced by the Taft Brothers to take the management of the Taft campaign. However, when Hitchcock resigned as assistant postmaster general, to take charge of the fight in the southern states, the doom of Mr. Vorys was sounded as a political manager. Just what Mr. Vorys is to get out of the deal is hard to guess. He is to be in charge of the Taft Cincinnati headquarters. He is to be responsible to Mr. Taft alone. He will have no connection with the management of the national campaign. He will have no part in the management of the state campaign. Whether he is to be a guard in front of the Taft Pike Street residence or a messenger in waiting is not announced.

It is well known that Ohio was the battleground that determined the supremacy of Mr. Mr. Taft in national convention. Never before was such a contest waged for the control of a single state. Vorys, a veritable tyro in political manipulation, emerged from the conflict with honor. Mr. Taft, however, was not really an Ohio candidate. Never having been identified with Ohio men and affairs, Mr. Taft obtained his first support from the east. Prior to the 26th of May, 1905, at the republican state convention, Mr. Taft had never addressed an Ohio audience. Mr. Taft was chairman of that convention. His next utterance was at Akron on the 21st of October of the same year. That utterance is historic. With in the past year, he has, to a measurable degree, unveiled himself to the people of Ohio, and has acknowledged that he was born in the Buckeye state. This concession of this nativity has been acknowledged by a grateful people. It has occurred to Mr. Taft that it would be a good thing to conduct a front door-step campaign from the Pike street residence of Chas. P. Taft in Cincinnati. From this it will be seen to what an extent Mr. Taft's interest in the grand old commonwealth has been aroused.

Mr. Vorys is to be tolerated in a merely clerical capacity, but all the glory will go to someone else, should Mr. Taft be elected president. It was Mr. Vorys who made all the promises for Mr. Taft in Ohio. It was Mr. Vorys who marshalled the workers that went to the front and did valiant battle against the redoubtable Senator Foraker. Republicans are said to be ungrateful. Can it be that republicans of the Taft stripe should be classed in the same category?

When Benjamin Harrison was the republican candidate for president in 1892 there was more than usual difficulty in finding some one with hardihood enough to manage the campaign. That year the republican national committee first selected Hon. J. S. Clarkson as the head of the executive body. Within a month Clarkson gave up the job in sheer disgust. He was succeeded by Hon. Thomas N. Carter, then, as now a member of the U. S. senate from Montana. Carter's task was a thankless one, for Harrison was overwhelmed at the polls election.

The trouble encountered by Mr. Taft and the republican national committee in finding suitable material for the chairmanship is to some extent a case of history repeating itself. Mr. Vorys was anxious to have the job of managing the Taft campaign but Taft didn't want him. Mr. Hitchcock was inclined to sidestep the task and only indicated his willingness to accept when he was assured that Mr. Vorys was not to be considered for a moment in connection with any position of authority in the management of the campaign.

Just how the changed attitude of the Tafts toward Vorys is going to effect republican prospects in Ohio, which is today a pivotal state, is a matter of conjecture. Mr. Vorys has made thousands of political friends on the strength of large promises. It will be readily seen that a goodly share of Hitchcock's task will be to make a safe disposal of the political assets of Mr. Vorys. The big question with Ohio Republicans is: "Will Mr. Hitchcock consent to the redemption of all the Vorys' paper?"

The Squire Mad at the Autoists.

[Portsmouth Times.]

Autoists, beware! If you don't quit your scorching on the Chillicothe pike, the first thing you know you will be jerked up before Squire George Lowry, who has issued an edict to that effect.

And it is no bluff that that official is trying to work off. He means just what he says, and has taken the necessary steps to see that his orders are obeyed. He has deputized four big men to arrest all autoists who are found guilty of exceeding the speed limit of fifteen miles an hour. Distances have been marked off, and while the deputized citizens have not been provided with stop watches they have a scheme to tell just how fast the autos are traveling.

It is claimed by Lowry that the owners of the machines have converted the pike into a speedway, and that some skim over the ground at the rate of 40 miles an hour, and incidentally filling houses along the route with dust.

Squire Lowry states that the other evening his wife was out for a drive and was keeping to the left of the road. Soon an automobile, crashed into the buggy, scaring the horse and almost upsetting the rig. The owner of the auto laughed at the predicament of Mrs. Lowry, then gave her a lecture for her careless driving and whizzed on by.

This sort of riled the Squire and he then issued his edict, and says that if anyone found guilty of disobeying his proclamation they will get the extreme limit of the law. If this does not stop the practice he will order his trusty men to puncture the tires with buck shot.
